Hackensack, N. J., May 2.—The silk dye strikers at Lodi, N. J., became violent this morning. One of the deputies named Gilbreath enraged a party of strikers who pursued him to the Alexander mill. The deputy took refuge in the office. The mob surrounded the building and threatened to tear down the obstacles in their way and kill the officer. Sheriff Soley has sent over a large force of additional deputies. A dangerous outbreak is feared. Sheriff Soley is swearing in all the men he can get as special officers to suppress the rioting. ## ALL THE MEN WERE BARRED.

Washington, May 2.—Mrs. John B. Henderson gave an entertainment at her Boundary Castle last night from which all men were sternly excluded. The entertainment consisted of fancy dances by the prettiest belles of the capital, members of a physical culture class.

The first number was a Spanish fandango, danced by Mrs. Crackenthorpe the beautiful daughter of General Daniel Sickles and wife of an attaché of the British Embassy. She afterward rendered the serpentine and skirt dance.

ped a quarter, pork three-quarters and mutton a half cent. If the weather turns warm, packers will probably have to sell at lower prices from now on.

Chicago, May 2.—If the refusal of the packers to buy live stock continues it may create a panic in prices. Fearing that the market may become glutted commission men are hurrying letters and telegrams for farmers and shippers to hold back their cattle. Cattle are offered at 25 to 40c hundred below prices of yesterday, but the retailers are not able to secure the benefit. None of the butchers has reduced the price of meats and the retailers do not expect any substantial drop in prices.

New York, May 2.—Hamilton Schuyler, formerly postmaster at Bellevue, Ohio, after wandering the country over for several months, a fugitive from justice, has finally got tired of the chase and surrendered to the police here. In February last Schuyler disappeared from Bellevue, taking with him $1400 of postal funds. He fled to New Orleans, traveled through other parts of the south and when he thought himself safe from pursuit he came to this city. He surrendered himself to the police here Wednesday. When arraigned before Magistrate Flammer this morning, Schuyler presented a woebegone appearance. His clothes were seedy and his face showed signs of the mental strain through which he has passed. Schuyler admitted the theft and said he was ready to suffer for his crime. He is now penniless, he declares, having fallen into the hands of Wall street sharpers who cleaned him out. Ohio officers have been notified to come on and get the penitent postmaster.

MATRONS

Of the National Capital Who Will Spend the Summer Away From the Social Whirl.

New York, May 2.—The Sun this morning prints a Washington dispatch containing interesting gossip concerning some well known society matrons at the capital.

"It is expected," the dispatch says, "that four of the leaders of Washington's brilliant social season just passed will permanently retire from society, seeking some quiet and secluded place of rest until next fall, when their charming wife will spend their quiet homes and be able to take up the social reins at the beginning of another official season."

"Naturally, the greatest interest is centered in Mrs. Roosevelt, who, in company with her children will leave Washington for Oyster Bay, where she will quietly spend the summer. "Interest is also felt in the rumor that enforced retirement will remove the charming wife of Senator Depew from the capital. "Just where General Corbin and his charming wife will spend their quiet summer has not been decided, but with the young and beautiful wife of the Belgian minister, Baroness Manchur, she will be able to enter upon next winter's brilliant social season with new interest and new zest."

DEMOCRATS

INSIST UPON INVESTIGATION OF THE ATROCITIES

In the Island of Samar—The Testimony of Governor Taft Regarding Luna

Washington, D. C., May 2.—The Democratic Senators continued their complaints against the majority members of the Committee on Philippines because of their declaration to summon here the witnesses from the archipelago whose testimony the Democrats desire to fortify the position they have taken against the proposed civil government for the Philippines.

The discussion was devoted almost exclusively to the testimony given by Governor Taft respecting the killing of Luna as learned by him from General Funston, the Democrats claiming that the testimony was hearsay evidence and that the principals involved should be summoned here to speak for themselves, especially Aguinaldo, the ex-President of the Philippines.

Mr. Carmack (Tennessee) stated that General Funston had said that Aguinaldo had confessed to him that he (Aguinaldo) had had Luna assassinated because Luna was becoming too popular. Governor Taft testified that General Funston had said Aguinaldo had had Luna killed lest Luna should kill him.

Mr. Foraker wanted to know what the killing of Luna by another Filipino had to do with the Senate's action on the pending bill.

Mr. Carmack said it had been the purpose of the majority of the Philippine Commission to show that Aguinaldo was a thief, bribe taker and murderer, and he urged that, in common fairness, Aguinaldo ought to be heard in his own defense.

The Patterson resolution calling on the President to direct the Secretary of War to order Major Cornelius Gardiner, former governor of Tayabas, from the Philippines to testify, went over until today.

Mr. Culberson (Texas) in support of a statement by Mr. Carmack that the war department suppressed information and falsified the Philippine situation, presented a letter from the Secretary of War which he thought was proof of the Tennessee Senator's assertion. The Secretary stated in the letter that it was not practicable to supply the information requested because no special account was kept of the Philippine war expenses.

MURDER

FILLED HER HEART WITH REMORSE AND FEAR

Afraid of Herself And Her Husband.

DRIVEN TO DISTRACTION

This Kansas Woman Confesses to the Authorities How Her Husband Killed a Little Girl.

Wellington, Kan., May 2.—Tormented by remorse and fear Mrs. Clara Cummings, wife of a wealthy farmer, has confessed a murder done by her husband, Anna Dishman, a pretty girl of 12 years, was the victim. For three years Mrs. Cummings kept the secret, but the memory of the dead was with her always, driving her to the verge of insanity. When, at last, she could bear the strain no longer, she unburdened her soul.

The husband is under arrest. To the court he has made a written confession and says that now, with the penitentiary before him, he found the first moment of peace since the midnight, three years ago, when he dragged the disfigured body of the little orphaned girl through the weeds and buried it.

Mr. and Mrs. Cummings were the only ones who knew of the murder. No one else even suspected that the girl had been killed. The murdered wife had not a friend on earth concerned enough about her to inquire into her disappearance. A reporter drove to the Cummings farm and found Mrs. Cummings there alone in the little front parlor yesterday.

Ever since the crime Mrs. Cummings says she has kept away from her husband and has nailed the door in the room where she slept, fearing her husband might kill her. "I was the only one who knew how he had killed the child, and I was afraid he would kill me, too," said Mrs. Cummings.

The woman, 33 years old, told the following story:

"Anna Dishman was only 12 years old when she came to work for us and she was here only eight months when she was killed. Her father was dead, and her mother was poor. She was a pretty little girl. My husband was always quarrelsome. He took a dislike to Anna because I liked her. The child got to hating him. Finally August 18, 1899, while we were at breakfast, and I was pouring the coffee, my husband cursed Anna as she came in. He grabbed the broom, ran to the door and threw it with all his might exactly as a spear is thrown. The end of the broom handle struck her just back of the temple. It cut a deep gash. I dressed the wound and we finished breakfast. Anna kept at her work the rest of the week. Saturday her head began to swell and I became uneasy. I took off the bandages and showed him the wound, and asked him if he didn't think it was dangerous I told him I thought blood poison was setting in. He cursed and said there was nothing dangerous about it. "Anna slept in the smokehouse back of our house. My husband hated her so that he would not let her sleep in the house, so she slept alone out there. Sunday when I got up, I noticed that Anna was not in the kitchen, and I asked him where she was. "She's sick," he told me. "I never went near her till between 11 and 12 o'clock that forenoon. I spoke to her, and all I could hear her was changed, and I knew right away that death had struck her. "Do you think it's too late to get a doctor?" "Yes, it's too late," he said. "Right after dinner I went to the smokehouse and she was lying on her face dead. "That night he took the spade and dug a grave down in the hollow and wrapped her up in a wagon sheet and dragged her through the weeds and buried her. The weeds were all broken down where he dragged her through, so he plowed up the ground over the grave and all, and sowed wheat on it that fall. "After that my husband didn't dare sleep without a light. He kept a light burning all night, and I slept in the room here with my boy and with the doors and windows nailed up. Just a year after he buried her he went one night and dug her up and hid her in a corn shock and kept her there a month. Then he got up one night and dragged her about half a mile to the straw stack and burned her up. When the fire was out he dug around in the ashes and found some bones and hid them in the hen house. The next Sunday he built a fire in the cookstove to burn the rest of the bones. I used some Anna's clothes for rags and the rest I burned, so that there wasn't anything left of her."

When Mrs. Cummings had ended her story she said: "That's all there is to it. Do you think they can arrest me for it?" Cummings is anxious to plead guilty to manslaughter and take a sentence of three years.

Judge Lawrence says he will not accept a plea of guilty until the case has been investigated. A lawyer said: "In the first place the state would have to prove that Anna Dishman is dead. As a wife in Kansas is not permitted to testify against her husband in a criminal case, how would the state prove that she was dead at all? It is a queer case any way you look at it."

The Judge intimates that he will hold Mrs. Cummings and the sons as accessories after the fact. He will take no bond for Cummings after he has been arraigned for murder.

LANDMARK

Between Newark and Granville is No More—Old Log Cabin Burned on Thursday Night.

Another old and well known Licking county landmark has disappeared forever, but memories of the pleasant associations of many years ago will remain for a long time to come. The old log cabin, which stood on the hill side on the Showman farm, three miles west of the city, is no more. It had long been a haven of refuge and shelter for the weary hobo and long ago had been given up as a place of residence. This cabin, which was nearly one hundred years old, was one of the few remaining reminders of the early days of the country.

The oldest people now living can remember the cabin when they were small children. When it was first built it was considered a swell residence for those days, and many were the "fandangos" held there by the young people, who came on horseback for miles around. At one time Mr. Robert Fulton, who now lives in the Cherry Valley, occupied this cabin, and when Mr. Jacob Showman, grandfather of Township Clerk Frank Showman, went on the farm in 1824, the cabin was occupied by a family, the name of which has been forgotten. Mr. Griff Rosebrough of this city visited the cabin on numerous occasions, and one time when there was a big dance, whistled for the dancers, there being no music, the fiddler having been unable to attend.

On Thursday the Showman boys applied the torch to the cabin, and all that was left of it this morning was a small pile of smouldering logs.

The Wrong Room.

"While spending a vacation at Bedford Springs, Pa., some years ago," said a Baltimore lawyer the other day, "I went late one night to my room, as I supposed, unlocked the door and was startled by a woman's screams. I realized at once that I had got into the wrong room. You may be sure I did not waste any time getting out into the corridor, locking the door again and entering my room, which happened to be the next one.

"While I was doing this the woman continued screaming, alarming the whole hotel. A crowd soon gathered, and when the woman could be persuaded to open the door she declared there was a man in her room. Of course no intruder was found, and as the door was locked when the crowd gathered, the lady was told that she must have had a nightmare and imagined she saw a man in her room. I kept quiet, and every one else in the hotel was convinced that the lady's imagination had worked upon her fears."—Baltimore Sun.

Popular Weather Notions.

How often do we hear the remark, "We shall have rain, the atmosphere is so heavy." The reverse is true. When one sees smoke hanging from a chimney, with a tendency to sink to the ground, it indicates that the atmosphere is light—in fact, too light to float the smoke. When the smoke rises from the chimney, it indicates a heavy atmosphere. A column of smoke is not a barometer, for a barometer simply records the pressure of the atmosphere. When the atmosphere is light and the smoke settles, the pressure on the mercury is light, and the column falls, indicating storm. When the atmosphere is heavy and the smoke rises, the pressure is greater and the column rises, indicating fair weather. Pleasure seekers and others before starting out should therefore watch the smoke.

Venetian Hospitality.

Whatever might have been said against the Venetians, they were a hospitable people—this, too, in small as well as in great matters. When, for example, in 1470, an ambassador from the khan of Tartary visited the city and it was known that the khan and his suit carried but one shirt apiece in their bags, the senate formally voted 20 ducats that they might be provided with additional shirts, which were accordingly made "alla tartaresca" and presented. We can imagine how the good counselors and citizens would enjoy this kindly little jest.

Pinned Faith to Plymouth Rock.

The dominance of New England sentiment in matters of ancestry and early history was illustrated at a certain meeting of women in New York the other day when the first English settlement was spoken of as having been made in Jamestown, Va.

"Why, I always thought it was in Plymouth rock!" exclaimed a daughter of New England. "And so did I." "And I," echoed others, at least half of the women present, all of them supposed to be well educated persons, being of that opinion.

Not True to Nature.

A favorite joke in cheap theatrics is a gay old man who is running around after the young and pretty girls. It's not true to nature. Young and pretty girls soon tire of an old man. They do not pay him any attention and say things that hurt his feelings. Old men are rarely gay, but they are usually belligerent.—Arlington Globe.

M. R. SCOTT

Pays His Respects to State Board of Charity Regarding the Habitual Criminal Act.

Newark, O., May 2, 1902.

Joseph P. Byers, Secretary Board of State Charities:

My Dear Sir:—I have been informed that a bill repealing the habitual criminal act has passed the lower house of the Ohio Legislature without a dissenting vote and is now up to the State Senate. Also, that there is opposition to it on the part of the Secretary of the Board of State Charities, who, I presume, represents the views of that Board—hence the earnest appeal which I wish to make to you as a public official, a citizen and a Christian.

Let me begin by conceding that you have the fullest right to your views on this question, and that I am bound to treat your views with the fullest respect. Nevertheless it pains me not a little to see the Board of State Charities, which ought to be the representative of all that is humane and merciful—and progressive—in penology making itself the bulwark of so Draconic and unmerciful a law as the habitual criminal act. I hold that your honorable board ought to be the leader—at least a faithful exponent—of the public intelligence and conscience in all matters pertaining to the reformatory discipline of prisoners, and that you should not only lean to the side of mercy, but should be quick to favor everything looking to the elimination of vengeance and the substitution of humane and reformatory discipline in the administration of criminal law. Lest you misunderstand me, I will qualify this by saying that you should favor everything in the line of mercy that is consistent with the public safety and welfare.

Assuming that you would answer me on this point by saying that you consider the habitual criminal act essential to the public welfare, let me ask you whether you are certain that such a view is well taken. On the contrary, does not the public reason and conscience consider this law essentially unjust and cruel? How else could you account for the fact that it has been put in operation in so few counties in the state? Anyhow, does the actual operation of this law satisfy you that it is really a measure of public justice—and a necessary one?

And have you such an acquaintance with the "cases" of the men who are suffering life imprisonment under this law as to pronounce it a just and righteous enactment and justify you in opposing its repeal in the eyes of God and man? If one of you own flesh and blood were enduring the misery and degradation of life imprisonment for three of the minor felonies in our statutes—or even three more serious ones—would you not consider such punishment "cruel and unusual" within the meaning of the constitution of Ohio? Above all, how do the provisions of this law harmonize in your mind with the law of mercy which Jesus gave us in the Sermon on the Mount and with the "malice toward none and charity for all" which Abraham Lincoln left as his message to mankind in his last inaugural address?

Let me also ask you whether you are familiar with Warden Darby's views on this law and have considered his reasons for advocating its repeal. Let me submit that he might give the Board of Charities some facts and reasons worthy of your most serious—yes, your most prayerful—consideration. Anyhow, if your mind is open to conviction and you desire to study this question as it ought to be studied, your place to do so, at least for a time, is down at the Penitentiary and from the standpoint of the prisoner's cell. If you would do this and make yourself familiar with the "cases" of all the habituals in that institution, remembering that they are made of the same flesh and blood as ourselves—of course, the public welfare should be kept in mind at the same time—I hardly think you would want to use your official or personal influence to prevent the repeal of the habitual criminal act?

As I have said, I am bound to treat your views on this question with proper consideration and respect; but at the same time it is impossible for me to reconcile your position with the principles of progressive penology of which you are—you certainly are supposed to be—the official exponent. Neither can I reconcile your position with the purposes for which the Board of State Charities was instituted. Therefore, I hold that instead of opposing the repeal of the habitual criminal act, the Board of State Charities should call for its repeal in the name of justice and humanity; to the end that offenders may never be punished with undue severity, and never but once for the same offense, and that the largest measure of mercy consistent with the welfare of the public may be exercised in all cases whatsoever. In my humble judgment, it would be much better for the Board to preach this doctrine in the ears of the Legislature and the people than to place itself in the path of human progress by sustaining so unjust—so unreasonable, so unrighteous, so unmerciful—and so unnecessary—a measure as I believe the habitual criminal act to be.

Since writing the above I learn that the habitual act was repealed on yesterday. "Praise God from whom all blessings flow!"

Most sincerely,

MILTON R. SCOTT.

Judge S M Hunter will be grand marshal of the parade, and Rev J C Schindel orator of the day.

Lincoln's Gettysburg address will be read at the graveyard by Prof F M Townsend, and the invocation there will be by Rev Lester S Boyce.

FOURTH REGIMENT

Colonel Coit Wants It To Be The "Crack Organization."

Fine Uniforms Ordered for the Fourth O N G Band—Forty Musicians are to be Enrolled.

(Columbus Dispatch.)

Colonel A B Coit of the Fourth regiment, O N G, is working hard to get the command in shape. Another company will be organized in Columbus, giving Columbus a full battalion, and it is understood that Perry Williams, who was battalion adjutant, under Major Speaks during the Spanish-American war, will be elected captain of this company.

The other companies will be located at Portsmouth. Ex-Senator Hard and other prominent citizens have guaranteed $5 of the best men in Portsmouth, Xenia, Delaware, Marion, London, Marysville, Newark and possibly one company at Coshocton.

Brand new uniforms have been ordered for the band and this aggregation will be increased to 40 pieces. Their uniforms will be something entirely different from any worn by the different regimental bands, and it is understood that Jess Worthington and the rest of the band will look like Robin redbreasts the first time they turn out on parade. The business men of Coshocton have taken the matter of the company up there and will form an honorary membership of about 100.

This will give the new company full financial backing; in fact the entire regiment is to be run on a different basis and the officers and men will be chosen very carefully from now on.

The Fourth regiment is looked to spring a number of surprises on the people of the state during the coming summer. There will be no more changes in the field and staff until Colonel Coit has had a thorough opportunity to get lines on the work of the regiment.

From Xenia comes a story that the Fourth will turn out July 4, when the Columbus carnival parade.

THE RICE TABLE.

A Distinctive and Remarkable Meal Served in Java.

"At 1 o'clock," says a correspondent of the Kansas City Star, "every hotel in Java serves a most distinctive and remarkable meal called the rice table (rijst-tafel). A large, flat, bowl shaped dish is placed in front of you, which you fill with beautiful, white, flaky rice, borne about in dishes holding fully a quarter of a bushel. Then comes a seemingly never ending stream of natives, each bearing a dish containing some different meat, vegetable or condiment, from which you take a small portion and place it on top of the rice. "After you have had a little of everything you mince it up with a knife and fork and mix it well with the rice and then fall to with a large spoon. A list of the side dishes, with an ordinary rice table, would read something like this: Fried eggs, omelet, fried chicken, broiled chicken, stewed chicken, beefsteak, sausage, fish, fritters, a mixture of vegetables stewed with a mustard dressing, raw cucumbers, liver and ten or twelve different spices and relishes, besides pickles.

Many a stout Dutchman have we seen take a liberal helping from each dish in addition to almost a quart of rice for a background of 'table.' Naturally every one must go to sleep immediately after such a meal, and all business is suspended for several hours. The dinner in the evening at 8 o'clock is a very simple meal."

A Royal Tragedy.

Frederick I. of Prussia was killed by fear. His wife was insane, and one day she escaped from her keepers and, dabbled her clothes in blood, rushed upon her husband while he was dozing in his chair. King Frederick imagined her to be the white lady whose ghost was believed to appear whenever the death of a member of the royal family was to occur, and he was thrown into a fever and died in six weeks.

The Attraction.

Gladstone told Lord Ronald Gower that once when he visited Rome he accidentally met Macaulay, who introduced himself to the statesman. On Macaulay's telling him that he took a daily walk in St. Peter's, Gladstone asked him what most attracted him in that place. "The temperature," was the answer.

Very Likely.

Sister Sue—in my new play, Mr. Daniels, the hero and the villain are to fight a duel.

Daniels—And who will get the worst of it?

Brother Tom—The audience.—New York Times.

Entirely Different.

"It's all very well before a girl's married for her to get a flower in her hair," remarked the observer of events and things, "but it's an entirely different matter if, after she's married, she gets her hair in the flour."

If a man asks you a question you can't answer, make your answer so long and shadowy that he will be glad to forget his question.—Arlington Globe.

The Teeth.

One of the commonest causes of bad teeth is that of taking very hot food. If you take a cup of very hot tea or coffee, the enamel on the teeth expands, and breathing the cold air afterward causes it to contract. This alternate expansion and shrinking of the enamel works havoc with it, and when it cracks, as it soon does, the inner part of the tooth crumbles away in no time.

SHOULD BE RENOMINATED

The services of Hon. J. W. Cassingham have been so satisfactory to the Democrats of this district, that there is no doubt of his unanimous renomination to Congress. Mr. Cassingham's popularity has been obtained by a strict adherence to duty, and attention to the wishes of his constituents. His democracy is of the time tried brand; he is no apologist but he is a fighter in the ranks. He gives the best services of his hand to the wants of his constituents and there are no appeals made to him which are unheeded. Under these circumstances nothing else can be done but to give Mr. Cassingham a second nomination, an honor he has won by fidelity to the people of the district regardless of party.—New Philadelphia Democrat.

We find the above expression from the Democratic organ of Tuscarawas county to be the general sentiment throughout the Congressional district Mr. Cassingham, who has been an earnest, sincere, rock-ribbed Democrat his whole life, always discharging every trust with the greatest fidelity, has proven himself a most faithful, industrious and useful Representative in Congress. His usefulness to his constituents is the remark in all parts of the district and no member of the present House of Representatives stands higher with his party than Hon. John W. Cassingham. Certainly he is entitled to a second term in the light of every worthy consideration.

There is no use kicking, says an exchange; "A majority of Uncle Sam's electors voted for the perpetuation of the administration that brought the rule of the trusts into existence and they ought to face the music without a murmur." We demur to that statement. True, the Democracy warned the electors of what was in store for them in the event of Republican success, but in passing judgment the frailty of the human intellect must be taken into consideration. So many people are susceptible to the wiles of the bunko stealer and can learn only from experience. The people who could not digest a syllogism during the campaign are able to digest beefsteak after the campaign is over. When they discover that it costs twice as much to purchase the beefsteak under trust rule as it did under the rule of the plain people, they learn something. The aching void in a capacious stomach compels a person to take notice of the plain people, they learn something. The aching void in a capacious stomach compels a person to take notice of the plain people, they learn something.

FLUNKYISM FLAMBOYANT.

(Chicago Chronicle.)
In an age of servile dedication there was never a more abject or more transparent subterfuge than the dedication of a volume of verse by Austin Dobson to Theodore Roosevelt. "To one more distinguished for his personal qualities than for his political position, lofty though it be, Theodore Roosevelt, I inscribe this volume." It is enough to make Dr. Johnson detester of patrons and patronized, turn in his grave. Excellent personal qualities Mr. Roosevelt has, other thoroughly mixed with the commonplace; on the whole, somewhat below as an individual the office he fills, which was filled by characters so much more ideal, a Washington, a Jefferson, a Cleveland, for example.

For any man to be more distinguished than the office of president of the United States is to be a man

Brilliant Career of General Miles.
Lieutenant General Nelson A. Miles entered the army as a mere boy over forty years ago. He rose so rapidly exalted in personal qualities above that small group of human beings all mankind agree to call the ideal group of men of the modern age, comparable, indeed, to the true idealists of any age. In this group Mr. Roosevelt does not belong by nature or by predilection or by habit.

The flunkies in literature when dedications were more the rule than they are now were wont to substitute subsequently another name for that of the patron originally inserted in a servile dedication.

Mr. Dobson ought to follow this example at an early day. His awkward attempt at apotheosis of a ruler, in only the first year of his rule exceeds the most audacious undertaking of any Roman poet during the empire.

MEMORIAL DAY'S LESSON.

What It Has Taught the People of the United States.

Nearly four decades have passed since the last soldier fell in battle in the war for the Union, and to a very large part of our people now the commemoration of the heroic dead needs, surely, has not the personal association that at first gave such solemnity to the annual decoration of their graves. But while the ceremony has thus lost something of its spontaneity, says the Philadelphia Times, it may really have gained more than it has lost in value. This day of flowers, which was at first devoted to the personal commemoration of the dead, grows more and more into a celebration of the impersonal virtue of patriotism, which was illustrated in their devotion to death.

And this is all the more valuable because it utterly excludes all that self-seeking, commercial element that for a time seemed to have taken possession of Memorial day and dishonored the soldier dead by associating with their memory a demand for recompense to their survivors. No matter what the measure of our obligations to the volunteers of 1861-65, they did not go into the war for pay or even for glory. "The world never saw a grander exhibition of unselfish sacrifice than they made in pure devotion to their country, and this is what we have to commemorate, what we have to emulate, what we have to teach our children to hold in lasting honor."

Memorial day thus takes its place among our American holidays as the festival especially of the military virtues, as Independence day commemorates the civic virtues and duties of patriotism. Not many times in the history of our nation has the great sacrifice of war come upon us, but whenever it may come we must take care that it find us ready with the courage and devotion and the enthusiasm that met all previous trials and secured to us our opportunities of peace.

MOODY TO THE RESCUE.

New Secretary of Navy Comes to a Car Conductor's Assistance.

They are telling a story in Washington about the new secretary of the navy. Mr. Moody was riding on one of the Boston surface cars and was standing on the platform on the side next the gate that protected passengers from cars coming on the other track. A lady, a Boston lady, came to the door of the car and it stopped started to move toward the gate, which was hidden from her view by the men standing before it.

"Other side, please, lady," said the conductor. He was ignored as only a born and bred Bostonian can ignore a man. The lady took another step toward the gate.

"You must get off the other side," said the conductor.

"I wish to get off on this side," came the answer in tones that congealed the official into momentary silence. Before he could either explain or expostulate Mr. Moody came to his assistance.

"Stand to one side, gentlemen," he remarked quietly. "The lady wants to climb over the gate."—New York Times

DISTILLED WATER.

It is the Purest, Best and Only Absolutely Safe Water.

Boil a gallon of water until there is but a quart left, and the quart will contain all the impurities of the gallon and be nearly four times as impure as before. Continue the boiling, and all the impurities—animal, vegetable and mineral, except the gases thrown off—will be reduced to one solid mass. The water which is evaporated and passed off as steam is very nearly pure. But, you will say, it lacks the dangerous germs. We will suppose it does, but their remains furnish material for bacterial life to feed upon. Do you relish the idea of eating in food or drinking their dead and decomposing bodies, which poison the water by their decomposition? The fact is scientific investigation has proved that boiling only kills the feeblest, the least injurious germs.

Try a simple experiment. Put unboiled city water in one bottle and the same that has been boiled for half an hour or more in another, cork tightly and keep in the sun or in a warm place for a week or longer and note the difference. The unboiled water will show a marked depreciation in looks, taste and smell, but that which has been boiled will be so much more in these respects that no one would think of using it. In comparison with these you can submit a properly sealed bottle of pure distilled water to the same conditions, and at the end of a year it will be found to be as pure, sweet and perfect as when first bottled.

The purest and best and the only absolutely safe water to use for drinking and the preparation of all foods and artificial drinks is that produced by distillation, but the most imperfect one produces a water far superior in purity and healthfulness to the very best spring waters under their most favorable conditions. The nearest approach to it in purity is rainwater, which is distilled water of nature's own production, when collected on clean surfaces, in uninhabited sections, where the air is pure and uncontaminated by smoke, dust, city and factory gases, etc.—Sanitarian.

SOME WRITERS.

Locke is said to have spent over six years in the preparation of his essay, "On the Human Understanding."

Lamartine, the great French poet, was happily married and received great aid from his wife in all his undertakings.

The great Dante was married to a notorious scold, and when he was in exile he had no desire to see her, although she was the mother of his six children.

Wolfe is said to have written "The Burial of Sir John Moore" in one evening directly after news had been brought of the defeat at Coruna and the death of the gallant British officer.

A friend of the late Walter Reagent relates that the novelist always kept on his desk before him a list of the characters of the novel he happened to be at work on, their relationship and appearance.

Hans Christian Andersen formed his style by narrating his stories to various groups of children before he wrote them down. His one thought was to become famous, and he was very careful not to make any enemies.

Dickens says in the introduction to "David Copperfield" that he spent two years in the composition of that novel. He did not usually require so long a time, many of his novels being finished in less than a year and most of his shorter stories in a few days.

Animals and Salt.

Among certain people there is a strong idea that nothing is worse for dogs than salt, but as a matter of fact, when administered in small quantities, it materially assists the process of digestion. There is no doubt, however, that to give dogs or any other animals broth or pot liquor in which salt pork or bacon has been boiled would be almost equivalent to giving them a small dose of poison. The use of salt among horses, cattle and sheep is advocated by the highest veterinary authorities. Pigs, on the contrary, are extremely susceptible to the poisonous influence of the agent, and experiments have been made which had, after small doses regularly administered, fatal results. Habitually, as a matter of course, all animals consume a certain portion of salt, as it exists in certain proportions in most articles of food.—London Mail.

Tilden's Dog.

At one of the early dog shows Samuel J. Tilden bought an immense Great Dane dog. "What's his name?" asked a visitor.

"Ask him," said Mr. Tilden.

"What good would that do?"

"It's his name," was the reply.

So it was—"Askim."

The dog knew a number of tricks, but would only perform when fed. "He'd make a good politician," said his owner as he gave him a bone.—New York World.

At the Parting of the Ways.
"Do you take this man to be your wedded husband?" asked the justice of the peace.

"I don't know whether to do it or not, squire," said the young woman, wiping her eyes. "He's got the money from me to pay for the license. I don't like to marry a man of that kind, and yet I hate to see $2 wasted."—Chicago Tribune.

VALUE OF VEGETABLES

Doctors Advise Cereal Diet to Kill Beef Trust.

SLAIN MEAT IS NOT ESSENTIAL.

Physicians Say Other Edibles Are Just as Nutritious—Dr. Cyrus Edson Predicts Abattoirs Will Soon Be Replaced by Factories for Food Products—Noted Chemist Favors Cereals.

That there is a way to best the beef trust and that the time is almost at hand when little or no meat will be eaten by either rich or poor is the firm belief of many persons today, among them prominent physicians and men of science, says the New York Evening Telegram. It has only needed the soaring of the prices of steaks and roasts to dizzy heights to arouse thinking people to a realization that after all meat is not essential to human existence, scientists and physicians declare, and to a belief that there is just as much nutriment and less digestive work in other forms of food, such as cereals, fruit, etc.

All the properties contained in the flesh of beasts, they maintain, can be found in the vegetable world, and consequently we might just as well be vegetarians, especially when the trust boosts the price of meat so high it can't be got anyhow. One of the most interesting predictions yet made in consequence of the beef trust is that uttered in an interview with a reporter by Dr. Cyrus Edson, who says that undoubtedly it will not be long before the abattoir will be replaced by manufactories of food products. Dr. Edson was seen at his home in New York and asked if he thought it possible for the human race to give up meat altogether and obtain the same sustenance from other foods.

"It can be done perfectly," he declared. "I think all scientists will agree that some day we will all be vegetarians. Instead of abattoirs we shall have manufactories for food products containing the proteins, the carbohydrates and the fats in sufficient proportions to support human life."

"The proteins, sometimes called the albumenoids, which we get in meat are also contained in certain vegetables. Take beans, for instance, or even fish, and the same properties are found. We find them also in the casein of milk and cheese. Aside from milk, the food containing the most albumenoid and proteid matter is the egg."

"The banana is a universal food and contains all the elements in pretty nearly the correct proportion necessary to support life, build up the body and run the fires of life."

"The laboring man, for instance, needs at least 120 grams of proteid matter, 50 grams of fat and 500 grams of carbohydrates—that is, sugar, bread, etc.—a day. Of these things the proteid matter is absolutely essential. The cheapest way of getting proteid is through skim milk. It is estimated that skim milk is about one-third the value of pure milk and that a given amount—say a gram—of proteid matter in the form of such milk costs one-fourth of what it would in the form of beef—that is, one-fourth of what the price of beef was before the recent raise in the market."

"These same properties that are found in meats are found, then, in cheese, skim milk, beans and bananas and make one just as strong and as vigorous as though taken in the form of meat. Fish and oysters are very rich in proteins and can be made to take the place of meat very satisfactorily, especially when accompanied by a diet of cereals and fresh vegetables."

"Then there are nuts. They are very valuable as food and contain proteid matter as well as fats. It is simply a question of time, and the time may now be hastened, when all these things will take the place of meat and fulfill all requirements of the human body."

Dr. George F. Shradly said he considered it quite possible to go from one year's end to the other without eating beef and be well and strong. Many, he said, already did this.

"One can derive all the nourishment one needs and wants out of other animal food than beef," he said. "and man can readily live the year round without it."

Professor H. W. Wiley, chief chemist of the department of agriculture at Washington, in a discussion the other day called forth by the present prevailing high price of beef earnestly advocated the more general use of cereals as food.

ROCHAMBEAU DAY FETE.

Elaborate Preparations for Unveiling Statue of Great Frenchman.

The unveiling of the Rochambeau statue at Washington the latter part of May will be a notable function, says the New York Tribune. The president is taking a deep personal interest in all the arrangements for the ceremony, and the committee, composed of Assistant Secretary of State Pierce, Colonel T. A. Bingham and Commander Raymond P. Rodgers, has arranged for their being successfully carried out. President Roosevelt has expressed his willingness to make an address, and it is his wish that all the military organizations in the vicinity of the capital should participate in the exercises, which will make the occasion what it should be, an imposing military demonstration, since it is to do honor to the commander of the French forces in America during the war of the Revolution.

The French government will be represented by a general of the army and two aids, an admiral of the navy and two aids and two officials of the foreign office, with their staffs. Count Rene de Rochambeau and Count Gaston de Lafayette have accepted the president's invitation to assist at the ceremony. The foreign guests will be entertained by the government during their stay on this side of the water, and everything will be done, both by the officials having the matter in charge and by those hostesses who are arranging functions in their honor, to make their stay in America a memorable one.

For the first time since her husband was accredited to Washington, four years ago, Mme. Cambon will visit that capital, and during the festivities that will mark the unveiling will act as hostess of the French embassy, which has had no mistress since the recall of M. Patenotre. Although she has never been in America, many members of the diplomatic corps have had the privilege of meeting Mme. Cambon, and she is said to be a woman of distinguished presence, wit, vivacity and charm.

The statue for the unveiling of which such elaborate preparations are being made is a replica of the memorial erected three years ago at Count Rochambeau's birthplace, Vendome, and was designed by Fernand Hamar, a young French artist of note and reputation. The figure is of bronze, heroic in size, and represents the officer in the uniform of a field marshal of France, standing with his right arm upraised as though giving the command for an attack. A symbolic study at the base—the figure of a woman holding aloft the flag of France, with her feet on the prow of a vessel—suggests the sympathy of France, the aid she sent across the sea to the young republic. The arms of the United States, of France and the Rochambeau family are also arranged about the foot of the statue. The day selected for its unveiling, May 24, is the anniversary of Rochambeau's entrance into the military service of his country. It will be placed on the southwest corner of Lafayette square, opposite the statue of Count Rochambeau's compatriot and companion in arms, the Marquis de Lafayette.

Denison's Field Day
The field day at Denison this year will probably be in the nature of a dual meet. The athletic council has been in correspondence with several of the Ohio colleges, and it is hoped to get Denison's old rival, Kenyon, for the meeting

An Errorless Game
Kansas City defeated Columbus on Thursday in the first game of the series, 6 to 2, battling both Thomas and Pleister hard. Columbus played an errorless game. The attendance, 1600, was again more than that at Louisville and Indianapolis combined.

A Great Pitcher.
Christy Mathewson again demonstrated that he is probably the greatest pitcher in the league, on Thursday. The Bucknell college boy let the hard hitting Quakers down with two hits, no runs and struck out nine of them. Voorhees also pitched a splendid game. Mathewson, also knocked out a home run.

A Remarkable Game.
That was a remarkable game played by Cincinnati and Chicago Thursday. For twelve innings Hahn, Cincinnati's great southpaw, battled with Jack Taylor, striving for pitcher's honors, and the decision was a draw. Taylor had a shade the best of "Noodles," only allowing five hits. Hahn also gave two bases on balls and made a wild pitch, something unusual for him. Cincinnati played an errorless game in the field, and each side made a double play unassisted. Beckley for Cincinnati and Tinker for the Chicago. The Reds only had a couple more hits than the Cubs, but they were the ones who might cut some figure in the race.

Seniors 19—Faculty 10.
The Seniors of Denison University defeated the Faculty team by a score of 19 to 10 in a six inning game on the athletic field Thursday afternoon. The day was perfect and there was a large attendance including many from Newark. Of course, the bulk of the crowd was made up of students of the University whose sympathies were divided, and they made enough noise in the supposed encouragement of their opponents, to thoroughly weary the spectators. A number of ladies gave the assemblage tone, but their presence did not detract some of the "smart" students from disgusting every one except their own ilk, with ribald jest and coarse guffing of the a concerted rush for the umpire, and he had to be given police protection. As it was he was saved from bodily injury, but a policeman was struck and injured by a flying brick. There is no question but that McGraw is responsible for these outbreaks of the Baltimore crowds. He will on all occasions dispute a decision with such a show of received injury, that the crowds imagine their team is being robbed and their money taken from them. Aggressiveness is all right, but senseless kicking should be stopped.

Partisan "rooting" is to be expected at a ball game, and it is right and proper, but no gentleman or true sportsman will descend to insulting personal remarks to players against whom he is endeavoring to turn the tide of victory. This is true in professional ball, and on none of the league grounds is it allowed, but it is a sad case indeed, to see young men of education, and supposed refinement, members of classes in a university, so demean themselves as some did yesterday, to the extent of addressing disrespectful and in some cases obscene remarks to members of the faculty of their school, who condescended to play base ball with the students.

Let it be said however, that these idiotic young rowdies were in a minority at the game, and the general undergraduate body acted in a sane and gentlemanly manner. Noise goes, but cut out the insults.

RED BLOOD

Pure Blood the Greatest Necessity of Life.

We Know Vinol To Be A Wonderful Blood Enricher.

You can't have a healthy house with clogged up sewer.

The blood is the flushing fluid of the system. When it is impure it ceases to carry off other impurities from the vital organs. What is worse it imparts its own poisons to the lungs, the kidneys, the liver, etc.

Those with rich pure blood know no ill health.

In all of our experience we have never met anything better than Vinol for thoroughly purifying and enriching the blood.

Vinol contains in a highly concentrated state just the elements that are needed to enable the blood to take from the stomach those properties it needs for enriching itself and reconstructing the body. It also enables the blood to get rid of the impurities it absorbs from the different vital organs in its circulatory action.

We wish to call your attention to the following letter which comes from one of the many who have been made well by the use of Vinol. It is from Miss Gertrude McCree of Toledo, Ohio, who is a daughter of the popular proprietor of the "Burnett" of that place. She says:

"For the past ten years the word health was to me meaningless. Doctors and their prescriptions were unsuccessful as far as the building up of my body and the restoration of my health was concerned, until one bright day my physician prescribed Vinol. I have taken up to now about fourteen bottles and find that it is more than all you claimed for it. For years it has been made well by for strength; now I have one prayer and an occasional dollar for Vinol and I am feeling stronger and better every day."

We wish to again extend the invitation that we have offered so many times to call on us and let us tell you more about Vinol. We are always ready to refund to anyone the price paid for Vinol if they are not satisfied with its action.

CURIOSITIES OF MICA.

Its Appearance Before It Is Split Into Sheets.

The mica as it comes from the mines is in blocks which are theoretically short rhombic prisms, but practically are scarcely recognizable as such, having a very rough and uneven contour. They have a very perfect cleavage parallel to the base and may be split into laminae thinner than the thinnest tissue paper, and these laminae form the familiar transparent stove panes and lamp chimneys. The exterior portions of these blocks are opaque, brittle and worthless, presumably from the penetration of water, for mica soon decomposes when exposed to any considerable weathering. A thick layer of plates has therefore to be removed from either face of the blocks before any mica of commercial size or value is reached, and the sheets split from the remainder are surrounded by a wide margin of worthless material.

But the difficulties and losses of mica mining are far from being all enumerated. Even when occurring in blocks of commercial size it is rendered valueless, or comparatively so, by one or more of a series of defects, which may be classed as color, specks, ruling, ribbing and wedge formation. It sometimes occurs literally pied with black dots, consisting in general of black oxide of iron or garnet, and when even a few of these are present its commercial value is destroyed, because such mica when used as an insulator is peculiarly liable to puncture, the specks forming practically short circuits for the electric current. The same is true of streaks, which are sometimes turned to red rust.

Some otherwise excellent mica is found to be ruled or cut, as it were, with a series of perfectly straight lines, parallel to one side of the crystal, so that on being split the mica falls immediately into strips; or, again, instead of being striped or ruled, the mica is often deeply ribbed or corrugated parallel to the adjacent edges of the crystal, so as to give the appearance of the letter A, or, rather, V, whence it is termed "A mica." As the ribbed portion has to be cut away in the sheet, such mica is unprofitable unless the blocks be large. Wedge mica is that in which the block is thicker at one end than the other, the laminae partaking in the unevenness. Such blocks are wholly worthless except as scrap.—Engineering Magazine.

OLD FASHIONED.

What has become of the old fashioned woman who said, "Oh, now you hush?"

What has become of the old fashioned man who had his picture taken in lodge regalia?

What has become of the old fashioned woman who wore a long gold chain around her neck?

What has become of the old fashioned woman who did things in three shakes of a lamb's tail?

What has become of the old-fashioned woman who referred to the best room in her house as "the room?"

What has become of the old fashioned home where the children sat with their noses at the window every night watching for their father?

What has become of the old fashioned girl who, as soon as she became engaged, got out her crochet needle and began to make her own trimmings?—Acheson Globe.

Took the Hint.

A story is told of a certain English bishop well known for his verbosity who rose to address the house of lords on a very important occasion. "I will divide my speech under twelve heads," he said, to the discomfort of his audience.

The Marquis of Salisbury begged to be allowed to interpose with a little anecdote. "A friend of mine was returning home late one night," he said, "when opposite St. Paul's he saw an intoxicated man trying to ascertain the time on the big clock there. Just then it began to strike and slowly tolled out 12. The man hesitated, looked hard at the clock and said: 'Confound you, why couldn't you have said that all at once?'"

The bishop heartily joined in the laughter which followed and took the hint contained in the story.

Two Good Whist Youngs.

Once upon a time two young men and two young women were playing whist, and quite frequently one of the young men and one of the young women found that their fingers were intertwined under the table, out of sight.

This finger contact did not in the least disconcert them—in fact, they appeared to enjoy the play much more than did the other young woman and young man.

All Over Again.

"Here are half a dozen prescriptions I would like to have you fill as soon as you can," wheezed Rivers.

"I can see they are all for the cure of a cold," remarked the druggist, looking them over.

"It's this way," explained Rivers. "When I had the other cold, I tried all these. One of 'em cured me, but I can't remember now, confound it, which one it was!"—Chicago Tribune.

Condemned in Missouri and Confiscated in New York.

Judge Clarke of St. Louis has convicted and fined heavily a number of grocers for selling baking powders containing alum.

The week before the Health Department seized a quantity of stuff being sold for baking powder which they found was made from alum mixed with ground rock, and dumped it into the river.

The Health Authorities are thus taking effective means to prevent the introduction into our markets of injurious substitutes in place of wholesome baking powders.

As alum costs only two cents a pound, there is a great temptation for those manufacturers who make substitutes and imitation goods, to use it. Alum baking powders can be detected by the health authorities by chemical analysis, but the ordinary housekeeper, whose assistance in protecting the health of the people is important, cannot make a chemical examination. She may easily know the alum powders, however, from the fact that they are sold at from ten to twenty cents for a pound can, or that some prize—like a spoon, or glass, or piece of crockery, or wooden ware—is given with the powder as an inducement.

As the people continue to realize the importance of this subject and consumers insist on having baking powder of established name and character, and as the health authorities continue their vigorous crusades, the alum danger will, it is hoped, finally be driven from our homes.

Parker-Doolittle.

The Newark friends of Mr. William Parker were greatly surprised to hear of his marriage to Miss Maggie Doolittle, also of this city, at Columbus, Monday, April 28th. Mr. Allison A. Whiteley of Philadelphia, acted as best man and Miss Hallie Skinner of Columbus, assisted the bride. After an extended trip through the South, Mr. and Mrs. Parker will reside in Newark, where after June 1st they will be at home to their many friends.

"Papers not filed in the Zuelch case, yet, but verdict will be, inasmuch as no examination of child will be possible and for lack of evidence to the contrary, 'death from natural causes.'"

BOY'S HISTORY OF BOER WAR

AN EIGHT YEAR OLD YOUTH DEFENDER

Of Fighters for Liberty in South Africa, Is Grandson of Ex-Secretary of State Foster

The latest author to take up cudgels for the Boers is Allen Welsh Dalles of this city, says the Washington correspondent of the Chicago American. He is a grandson of John W. Foster, ex-Secretary of State. He has reached the mature age of eight years. His book is entitled, "The Boer War," and was printed on March 15, Mr Foster acting as publisher.

The first addition was 200 copies. Another edition is now on the press. This will be 300 copies. The book sells for 50 cents. Secretary Foster bought two for himself.

The $100 young Dalles has secured will be sent to better the condition of Boer women and children in the South African concentration camps and the destitute Boer prisoners in the Beaudas.

The preface of the book, which was evidently written by ex-Secretary Foster, says:

"The author of this history, who is eight years old, has been, since the war began in South Africa, an ardent admirer and partisan of the Boers and this in spite of the fact that at of his immediate family favor the British cause."

"The reported suffering of Boer women and children in the African concentration camps and the destitution of Boer prisoners in the Beaudas aroused his sympathy and the desire to do something to relieve their condition. Two months ago he determined to write a history of the war with the avowed purpose of sending the money which he should receive from the sale to the Boer relief committee for the benefit of these sufferers."

Since that time he has industriously gathered his facts, and day after day for nearly two months he has written out what he has read and heard, to gether with his own opinions and conclusions.

When the work was completed ex-Secretary Foster had it printed. He stipulated to the printer that "copy" must be followed absolutely.

Here is a summary of the first edition:

"In the year 1652 the Boers landed on Cape of Good Hope, finding no people but a few Indians which they had to fight before they could have the land to themselves, but as soon as they had conquered the Indian they set to work to build towns and houses. But the smallpox was among the Dutch, so there was no room for the newcomers; but after a little the Dutch found there was some gold at a place called Johannesburg.

"There would not be any quarrelling if it was not for the gold. It was not right for the British to come in and get the land because the Boer came first and they had the first right to the land. If Great Britain had got there first then they could have the land."

"The British did not know at first that the Boers were going to be so hard to conquer or they would no have started the war, but now they have started they think they can surrender to such a little country England will gain very little by the war, for it will cost a great deal to run the mines, and the war has already cost England 1,000,000,000 dollars and the war may not be near an end yet."

"The British found that if they could not fight the Boers out of their land that they would burn them out so they began to burn the land, but they could not burn the houses and have the poor women and children starve to death so they had to huddle them altogether and tried to feed them as well as they could so they could get the land."

"Once when Botha attacked Lord Roberts his soldiers went and had to hand the concentration camps for safe ty and the Boer in trying to kill the British, killed eleven of the Boer women. That shows how unmanly and cowardly the British are trying to conquer the Boers."

"England ought to be content if she owned the mines where gold is, but no, she wants to have the land, too. She is all the time picking out little counties. A little time ago she was trying to make war on Venezuela, and now, in South Africa, is trying to squeeze the life out of the Boers. But she is finding it hard work to do it. All her crack soldiers are being cut up by the Boers.

"One day the British tied ten billy goats to try the effect of some hideout shells, and so he fired about twenty of them, and then went up to see how many were left, and there were eleven—one had been born."

"During the latter part of the war the Americans have been exporting horses to South Africa for the British to use. The people who are having it done don't know how much it helps the British. They think if they send 1,000 horses to South Africa that it won't be much to 300,000 trapes, but they think that they can get money and not help the British very much, but they keep on doing it until it does amount something. I think that England is big enough to get her own horses, and if not she ought not to have started the war, for she can't depend on other nations to supply England with horses. This exportment of horses to South Africa is not done by the government, but by private people for the reason that the government cannot stop it."

GRANVILLE

CLASS RUSH FOLLOWED BALL GAME THURSDAY.

Denison's Dramatic Club—The Glee Club Goes to Martinsburg Commencement—Personals.

Granville, Ohio, May 2—While returning from the ball game on Thursday evening the Juniors tried to block the Seniors' wagon, which was coming down Broadway, by placing a large hay wagon across the road, completely blocking it. There was a general mix-up for a few moments, and the Seniors succeeded in removing the obstruction from the road. During the scrimmage George Hartshorn had his head badly cut by the brake beam of the wagon hitting him. He was assisted to a Doctor's office, where it was necessary to take several stitches in the wound in order to close it up. A report of the game is given with other sports elsewhere in this paper.

The Denison Dramatic Club, a new organization, which has been practicing for some time under the instruction of Prof Neil, will give a double entertainment on Tuesday evening, May 20. Two plays will be presented, "A Scrap of Paper," and "Lend Me Five Shillings," both of which are bright and sparkling plays and will no doubt draw a large audience.

The ball game between the members of the Faculty and the Seniors on Thursday afternoon was a success in every way. The boys cleared over $75 on the game.

There is a strong probability that a rack meet between Kenyon College and Denison will be held during commencement week.

Quite a number of our citizens will attend the Wallace circus in Newark on Saturday.

Dan Daub, who pitched ball for the Denison team in '90-'91, signed to play with the Kansas City Western League team.

Denison and Muskingum of New Concord, will cross bats on the diamond here Saturday.

Mrs. Burton Case entertained a number of her friends at her home on Broadway on Wednesday evening in honor of Mrs. George Baldwin of Springfield, Mass. and Mrs. Dr. Shrover of Chicago.

Miss Alice Morrison of Dayton O. who has been visiting here during the past week, the guest of friends and relatives, has returned home.

The Denison Glee club will furnish the music for the commencement of the Martinsburg high school, which will occur Friday evening May 9.

Cause For Mourning.

"During the year that I have been getting manuscripts back from unappreciative editors," said Charles Theodore Murray the other night, "I have observed a general tone of apologetic regret in the accompanying notes of rejection, as though the dear editors feared that my feelings might be hurt. Of course I have become so hardened by this time that the return of some of my manuscript fails to arouse any feeling at all, but I must confess that Richard Watson Gilder rather startled me to thinking last month when he sent me back a humorous sketch of which I was especially fond in an envelope with a deep black mourning border and without comment."

Cloths or Clothes.

One learns many strange uses and misuses of things at country inns, but let us hope that the following experience related by a friend of mine as having happened to himself is a rare one: He had gone to bed in an Irish inn, bidding the landlady to have him called at 8 A. M.; however, next morning, she knocked at his door. "We've to get up," she said. "What o'clock is it?" "Six, sir."

"Go away. I am not going to get up till 8."

At 7 she reappeared. "Indeed, and ye must get up now. It's 7." Finding him unmoved at her next return, she said: "Get up, there's a sweet gentleman. There's two commercial gentlemen waiting for their breakfast, and I can't lay the cloth till I have yer honor's top sheet."—Cornhill Magazine.

With All My Worldly Goods.

A minister whose first parish was in the backwoods of the west some years ago said that he once married a very seely looking bridegroom to a buxom girl of perhaps twenty years. The ceremony was performed in the log cabin home of the bride's parents, and there were many guests present. When the bridegroom repeated the vows, "With all my worldly goods I thee endow," all tall, lank fellow with a huge tobacco end in his bulging cheek drawled out nasally:

"Thar goes Hank's bull terrier, by gum!"—Lippincott's Magazine.

The Death Chair.

Doubt is often cast upon electrocution as a system by the fact that persons may survive an accidental shock of 2,000 volts. The Electrical World and Engineer points out that the conditions of a chance contact are entirely different from those provided in the chair. It says, "There can be no question that the subject dies by the effects of the electric shock and is dead beyond all hope before the autopsy takes place."

Pure Blood.

If infectious disease is in the vicinity, it should be remembered that pure blood contains bodies that will combat disease germs. These bodies are the white corpuscles, and they will envelop and actually devour the fatal bacilli of fevers and similar diseases. So it is well to keep the vital fluid in health.

BLINDING A SHARK.

How a Pearl Diver Escaped a Vicious Man Eater.

A successful diver must possess great courage and nerves of steel. Such a man connected with a large wrecking company was visiting some years ago the pearl fisheries in the gulf of California, where sharks abounded. On one of his trips in quest of the pearl oyster he had a narrow escape from a fearful death.

He had been instructed never to stir from the bottom until he had looked up and around. Fortunately he heeded the advice. Having filled his bag he glanced quickly about and caught sight of a huge shovel nosed shark watching him.

In an emergency men think fast. Near the diver was a large rock. He moved quickly to the other side of it, hoping to dodge the ferocious monster, but the maneuver did not work. The shark watched every movement, changing his position by a slight motion of his powerful tail.

Time was precious, and the diver conceived the idea of blinding the shark by stirring up the mud. Under cover of that he might escape. He worked for dear life and had the water thick with mud in less than half a minute.

Slipping around the rock again, he rose to the surface, having barely strength enough to reach the side of the boat, and was hauled on board just as the voracious man eater made a rush for him.

Bring the Ends Together.

A certain colonel somewhere in the south (no matter where) was in the habit of telling yarns and greatly exaggerating. He had a negro servant who corroborated everything his master told. One day the colonel had some gentlemen to dinner, and they were enjoying some fine venison very much. The colonel said: "Yes, I went hunting the other day and saw a fine buck. I took a good sight at him and shot him through the head, and the bullet went through his hind leg."

The gentlemen looked at each other a little mystified. The negro scratched his head and at last said, "Yes, indeed, gemmen; just as massa raised the gun to shoot de buck he raise his hind leg and scratch his ear, and the bullet went through the head and right through de hind leg." The gentlemen looked more satisfied.

After the guests had gone the negro said to his master, "Gorry mighty, massa, next time you tell one of dem yarns do get the ends closther together. I had hard work to make both ends meet."—New Orleans Times-Democrat

Explained His Meaning.

In a case of assault and battery before Judge B in the quarter sessions court a well known doctor who was a witness said he had treated the prosecutor for a black eye.

"What do you mean by a 'black eye'?" asked the attorney for the defense.

"I mean," said the doctor, "that the prosecutor had received a severe contusion over the lower portion of the frontal bone, producing extensive ecchymosis around the eye, together with considerable infiltration of the subcutaneous areolar tissue."

"Serves you right," said the judge to the prosecuting attorney. "Everybody knows what a black eye is."—Philadelphia Times.

He Kept Grand Medicine.

In a Scotch village, where a young doctor had lately started practice, a workman had the misfortune to get his finger bruised badly in one of the mills. A doctor was sent for, and on properly dressing the finger the man nearly fainted. He was asked if he would take a little spirits to revive him.

"Mon," he exclaimed, with feeling, "that wud just be the very life o' me!" The doctor gave him a good glass, which he greedily swallowed, and on recovering his breath his first words were, "Well, doctor, I ken unco' little about yer skill, but, mon, ye keep grand medicine."

The Thinking Strain.

When once one no longer thinks it necessary to reflect whether one ought or ought not to do or avoid a thing, the saving of time and tissue is quite enormous, for it is not so much doing things as thinking about them which consumes the minutes and the nerves, and, once having made an unalterable rule to do a thing if it is pleasant and refrain from it if it is not, one can get into a single day a number of delightful experiences which would appear to those who do not know the recipe quite incredible.

—E. B. Benson, "Scarlet and Hyssop."

A Peculiarity of Japan.

In Japan it is always the rule of politeness to pay a trifle more than the sum mentioned on your hotel bill. To settle the account net would be considered an insult or at least a mark of great dissatisfaction. People who have traveled in Japan say that the Japanese always tip the waiter on entering a hotel.

Easy Way Out.

"I'm fixed," said the young doctor. "I've got a big enough practice to keep me in easy circumstances for life."

"But suppose you should lose half your patients?"

"I'd just double my bills on the others."—Philadelphia Press.

A Sad Business.

"Yes," he said sadly, and there was a tear in his eye—"yes, my business has driven me to the wall."

And he went on posting bills.—Chums.

I never saw a failure yet that wasn't worth more than it cost—if the fellow that failed made use of it.—The Great White Way.

Several persons hurried to his assistance, among them being Dr. Stephan. It was found that he had sustained a painful injury on the head and that he had been badly bruised about the shoulders and right arm.

OCEAN CABLES DOOMED

Fessenden Believes His Aerial Problem Solved.

DISTANCE NO LONGER A FACTOR

Latest Wizard of the Air Claims All That Is Required Is Additional Amount of Energy and That Wireless Telegraphy Will Be Established Across Oceans Within Five Years.

"Telegraphing through space by means of etheric waves is no longer a theory; it is now an actuality, and I hazard nothing in predicting the ultimate abandonment of the old transatlantic cable."

Professor Reginald A. Fessenden, the new wizard of the air, in talking with Lieutenants Huggins and Beecher of the naval equipment bureau, and Superintendent Tittman and Assistant Wainwright of the United States coast and geodetic survey at his experiment station on Wier's point, Roanoke island, thus commented on his new wireless invention, says a Washington dispatch to the New York Journal. Professor Fessenden was referring to the fact that a message of 127 words had been received through space from Cape Hatteras to Wier's point, a distance of fifty-three miles.

"I don't mean," Professor Fessenden continued, "to appear overenthusiastic, but I know what can be done with my invention, and the possibilities in store are almost limitless. In my experiment over fifty-three miles I used a quarter inch spark, which was really more than was required—a sixteenth inch flash would have done quite as well—and in order to communicate over greater distances it is only necessary to lengthen the spark and supply additional energy."

"Do you think it will ever be possible to utilize your system for communicating with points on both sides of the Atlantic?" one of the visiting board asked.

"Not only possible, but a practical certainty. Before the end of five years—indeed, in probably less time—we shall be able to transmit messages across the ocean with more rapidity and precision than it is now or ever can be done by the old cable method."

Putting the receiver to his ear, Professor Fessenden opened his key—and answered a call. "I've got a message for you from Moore," said the operator at Hatteras, and then, calling Operator Dorman, Professor Fessenden, with the others of the party, stood beside the operator while he copied a message. It came through faster than the ordinary operator sends and much faster than the common run of commercial operators are able to receive. Part of the message, which was of a private character, was coded.

"How long before you will be able to telegraph over greater distances?" was asked the inventor.

"Just as soon as we can get our instruments in shape," he replied.

"Distance is not a factor. It will be quite as easy to talk over a much greater space as it is to talk over the fifty-three miles between the Wier's point station and Cape Hatteras. All that is required is additional energy and enlarged wave sparks. I believe I have solved the problem of wireless communication, and it is certain that this system has been evolved from the complex to the simple."

"The coherer which other wireless inventors have regarded as essential in this work is not used by me; instead I employ an invention of my own, the 'wave detector,' which is more powerful and can be worked with more accuracy and with less force and energy than is necessary in the coherer."

"Within a short while, probably within two months, the weather bureau will erect wireless stations along the middle and north Atlantic coast, where they will receive wireless meteorological messages from ships far out at sea. The bureau plans to equip certain vessels with Fessenden instruments, and when properly attained they will be able to communicate with the shore stations quite as accurately as by wire. In this manner the weather bureau hopes to be able to predict ocean storms far in advance of their arrival."

Latest in Handshakes.

Every now and then some extraordinary fad turns up in society, becomes the rage and then vanishes, leaving behind a sense of wonder that "one could have been so silly." Do we not all remember how, a few years ago, people used to pull one another's hands down from on high when shaking hands, as if pulling a bell rope? Lately there has appeared here and there a new thing in the way of shaking hands. Take your friend's hand with your fingers and move it slowly to the left and then to the right exactly as if you were pushing a horizontal bolt. The effect on the pusher, according to The Tatler, is very funny at first. Is this to be the fad of the future? If so, it ought to be styled the "push bolt shake."

Trade in Rare Butterflies.

The trade in rare butterflies is increasing in London, and ingenious deception, according to the Cleveland Plain Dealer, is practiced regarding them. Ordinarily butterflies are caught and killed. Then girls are employed to smear the gauzy wings with thin mudlage and sprinkle fine metallic powder of various colors on the wings. In this way the collector can be supplied with the most beautiful specimens almost while he waits.

MAKING BONELESS HAMS.

Housekeepers May Do It as Well as a Professional Butcher.

Little though one may think, the process of making a boneless ham is quite a fine art and one that requires no small degree of skill in the undertaking. In fact, it is not every one who can "bone" a ham successfully. In the event a housekeeper unfamiliar with the art of removing the bone from hams were to undertake the job she would be almost certain to begin operations by first of all splitting the ham open and endeavoring to carve out the bone by cutting around it. The result would be failure and vexation of the worst sort, to say nothing of a ruined ham. The proper way to remove the bone would never suggest itself to the average housekeeper.

The operator stands the ham on end against a supporting block and proceeds to carve around the bone from one end as deep as it is possible for him to run his hand and knife down into the flesh and around the bone. Having reached the extreme limit (as far, in fact, as it is possible to extend the knife), he reverses the ham and begins cutting around the bone from the other end, cutting downward until he reaches the point that he attained in cutting from the end on which he began, the entire operation being scientifically correct and on the principle of skinning an animal. The bone then slips out clear and smooth, free from any adhering flesh.

As soon as this is done stout twine is wrapped around the ham and drawn taut, completely closing the aperture left by the removal of the bone. The twine is thus made fast and the ham laid away for a day or two, at the end of which time the hole has closed so neatly that, in slicing the ham, it is difficult to determine the exact spot from which the bone was removed. This is the proper mode of making boneless ham, and with a little practice any housekeeper can learn to do the work as well as a professional butcher. They will observe that first of all the bone is surrounded by a tissue, and by starting the operation from the ends they will be surprised with what facility this tissue, dividing the bone from the flesh, peels loose from the former.

A CURE AND A FEE.

Peculiar Experience of a Doctor With a Business Man.

In conversation one day about the peculiar views that commercial men sometimes entertain about professional services Dr. S. Weir Mitchell told the following story:

"A very wealthy man from the west came to consult me about an attack of vertigo. He said that he had just returned from a trip to Europe, where he had consulted eminent specialists, but that they had failed to afford him any permanent relief. 'A physician in London,' he said, 'asked me why I did not make an attempt to be cured nearer home. I thought on my way out west I would stop over to see you.' 'Has any physician you have visited looked into your ears?' I asked."

"No," was his reply. "I made an examination of his ears, removed some wax and a substance that appeared to be hardened remnants of cotton wool. I sent him away then and told him to come again in a day or two. He did so."

"Well," he exclaimed, "I am cured. How much do I owe you?"

"About $50," I replied.

"As he drew a check he asked, 'Did you know when you first examined my ears that you could cure me?'"

"When I told him that I had a very fair conviction that I could, he said: 'Well, you are a blanketed fool. You should have said to me: "I think I can cure you, and I will do so for $10,000. No cure, no pay." You would have got your money without a murmur.'"

"Oh," I said, "if you feel that way about it there are several little charities in which I am interested, and—"

"No, no," he interrupted, "that is not business. I have my cure, and you have the price you asked. The transaction is closed."

Brass in England in Chaucer's Time.

A metal resembling brass, but said to have been superior in quality, was known in England as "maslin" as early as the time of Chaucer, and in the reign of Henry VIII. an act of parliament was passed prohibiting the export of brass out of England. Whether the earlier monumental brasses still to be found in our churches were made originally in England is not absolutely certain, the probability, according to some authorities, being that they were of French or Belgian workmanship.—Chambers Journal.

An Urgent Case.

When the doctor's telephone rang late one night, he went to the instrument himself and received an urgent appeal from two fellow practitioners to come down to the club for a quiet game.

"Emily, dear," he said, turning to his wife, "I am called out again, and it appears to be a very serious case, for there are two doctors already in attendance."—New York Times.

THE JAPAN CURRENT.

Kuro Siwo Files Great Loads of Driftwood on Alaska's Shores.

In one sense the Kuro Siwo, or Japan current, is the most interesting in the world because many oceanographers believe it was the direct means of peopling America. This much at least is certain: If a boat were to be set adrift on parts of the Asiatic coast and survived all storms, the Japan current could be depended upon to carry it across the Pacific and deposit it on the American shore. Such a thing has happened. In 1832 nine Japanese fishermen were left derelict and unable to find their way back to shore. They went with the current, and after a drift lasting during several months they were carried to Hawaii.

Trees torn by storms from the banks of Asiatic rivers frequently float across the Pacific to the American coast. Between Kakatag and Kyak islands, between 1,200 miles northwest of Seattle, enormous piles of this driftwood cover the beaches. There can be no question of the Asiatic origin of the timber. They are the trunks of the camphor tree, the mango and the mahogany. Logs 150 feet long and eight feet in diameter are frequently found. Many of them are seen floating shoreward, with fantastic roots standing high above the waves. In places the logs are piled twenty feet high. They are generally without bark, which has been peeled off by the waves, and most of them have become white and heavy from impregnation with salt water. As they pile up the sands drift over them, and gradually they sink out of sight, and new beaches are formed. This process has been going on for ages, and the shore line is being steadily extended. Excavations along the beach show that texture of the buried timber gets harder and harder the further in you go, until in some instances petrification has taken place. Other excavations show logs that have turned to coal.

The presence of Siberian driftwood on the shores of Greenland convinced Nansen that his idea of drifting across the Polar sea in the Fram was logical. Great quantities of the wood are annually cast on the coasts of Spitzbergen and Nova Zembla, and there are tribes of Greenland Eskimos who depend for sledge runners and other wooden implements on the drift from Siberian forests. For years they depended for iron implements on the hoops of casks which came to them over seas.—Theodore Waters in Ainslee's.

The Willing Worker.

"Why is it," asked a modest young breadwinner, "that when I stay at the office after hours to voluntarily do an extra amount of work somebody who is in charge pounces upon me as his justifiable victim and gives me still more to do?"

"That has happened to me time after time in my business, and at each repetition I have taken a vow that if I am ever in charge of an office I shall give any one of my subordinate who sits down and does work which isn't specifically required of him credit for what he does do and let it go at that, without adding insult to injury, as it were, by giving him something further to do."

"Of course it's an old saying that the man who does the most work is the man usually 'worked,' but it's discouraging, though, he goes ahead and lets himself be 'worked,' with only a weak objection to ease his feelings."—New York Mail and Express.

Mushrooms Are Filling.

One virtue of the mushroom of olden times is not realized by its champions even in its nutritive qualities. For it is often considered fit only for a sauce or a side dish. Recently I ate dinner with a friend who is a bon vivant and gifted with an abnormally large appetite. To my surprise, he ordered nothing but mushrooms, bread and butter and, of course, drinkables. We had mushrooms raw, stewed, fried and broiled on toast. It was my first experience, but I found them excellent. I certainly thought they would not "stay by me," but, to my surprise, for many hours afterward I had as complete a sense of fullness as rare roast beef or juicy steak ever imparted.—New York Telegram.

The Congressional Record.

To appreciate the value of The Congressional Record one must see it used. It is the only means by which members themselves keep informed of the progress of legislation when scores of measures are often considered in a day. It is on the desk of the president of the United States and is read by every executive officer, from cabinet to chief of division. Every government in the world envies ours the possession of such a publication, forming at once an indispensable current record and a permanent history of events even more valuable through the centuries.—Argument.

Cigars and Tobacco.

There are between 1,500,000 and 2,000,000 brands of cigars sold in this country, and your average smoker thinks that every brand means a different kind of tobacco. As a matter of fact 150 is an outside estimate of the different kinds of tobacco that can be procured from all sources, and even experts can't tell so we of these parts.

BRAINS AND BEVERAGES.

Famous Literary Lights Who Reviled Coffee and Tea.

Famous literary men have all had their favorite beverages. Tea and coffee, however, head the list, and these two drinks, which the famous William Cobbett denounced as "slops," have been the means of spawning many a drowsy journalist to renewed energy.

Voltaire, the king of wits and litterateurs, was a confirmed coffee drinker. In his old age he often took fifty cups a day, which sadly hurt his digestion and hastened his death. Balzac never drank anything else but coffee, and during the early hours of the morning, for he began at 12 o'clock midnight, he used to take copious drafts of this stimulating drink.

Sir James Macintosh was so fond of coffee that he used to assert that the powers of a man's mind would generally be found to be proportional to the quantity of that stimulant which he drank. Cowper pays a tribute to tea in the "Task" when he says "the cup that cheers, but not inebriates." He was a very fond of the Chinese beverage. But the king of tea drinkers was Samuel Johnson. On one occasion Sir Joshua Reynolds reminded the great man that he had drunk eleven cups of tea, whereupon Johnson retorted: "Sir, I did not count your glasses of wine. Why then should you number my cups of tea?"

A Protest That Failed.

"During my stay in the City of Mexico," says a well known Philadelphian, "I went out one Sunday to see a bull fight. It's the proper thing to do, you know. All the American tourists go. Seated very near to me in the raised benches of the amphitheater was a German woman whom I know by sight as an enthusiastic member of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. She is one of those who insist upon showing a badge every time a driver uses a whip on a bulky horse and demanding an arrest."

"Well, she had her little badge on all right, and when the fight between the bull and the peadors became pretty hot she jumped up in her seat and demanded that it be stopped. 'Stop this at once,' she shouted, waving her arms. 'Sit down, Maud, and don't make a fool of yourself,' exclaimed her husband. But she insisted upon having her own way. 'I am a member of the Pennsylvania Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals,' she declared, waving the lapel of her coat that contained the button. 'I demand that this butchery shall cease.' Everybody laughed at her, and after awhile she went out, taking her husband with her."—Philadelphia Record.

"Wooden Russia."

The name "wooden Russia," says our consul at St. Petersburg, is familiarly applied to the vast forest areas of Russia in Europe, which cover 464,748,000 acres, or 26 per cent of the entire area of the country, yet some fear is felt that the country may be deforested through the carelessness of private owners, and the government is considering steps for the protection of the forests. In Russia houses built of any other material than wood are almost unknown outside the cities, and wood constitutes the principal fuel.

An Ill Omened Title.

There is a proposal in England to revive the somewhat ill omened title of duke of Gloucester, which was borne by Richard III, before he slew his way to a usurped throne. The title was last revived by George I, who in 1714 made his grandson duke of Gloucester. This young man was not an ornament to the peerage. The dukedom became dormant again when, the second of this creation died without issue. Should the title be revived once more it would be conferred probably on one of the Prince of Wales's sons.

An Extremopore Pan.

An oft quoted old English wit is Daniel Purcell, who is worthy of immortality as a master of repartee. The best of the reported witticisms of this forgotten jester is as follows:

Purcell was desired one night in company by a gentleman to make a pun extempore.

"Upon what subject?" asked Daniel.

"The King," answered the other.

"The king, sir," said he, "is no subject."
